

Looking back on the times
I wonder how I ever forgot
The sound of laughter as we climbed
As high as we could ever get

Pacing through endless fields
Making memories together forever
Swearing how this feeling could never yield
With the joy of being around each other

Endless ramblings of the newest Disney movie
While squished together on the seat of a bus
Who knew the pure essence of this beauty?
Time only raced against us

Now that we're older, we can only smirk at these thoughts
Smiling warmly at old, familiar objects
Between all of the situations that life throws across
Nothing can take away the feeling of one's upbringing
